

it, you know. And had the Post Office up there, and a railroad---there was drug store right here you see.

(What year was that, do you remember?)

Ah! Don't worry about that, I can't recall all those things. Well, that's Cherryville, there was an cherry orchard then, (not clear) were all ready started, you know, across the railroad track. I don't think that's the school, here. In Park Hill, Old Man Williams and there of Mrs. Williams, this boys stepmother.

(Now were they Cherokee?)

No, they were white people.

(White.)

Ah-hum. Now I don't know where the Williams' come from, but, this man's daughter married a Floyd Halfcoat. And she's with him now, they live in Tahlequah. And her daughter works at the hospital.

(Sanders.)

That's in Tulsa. Sanders.

(You know her.)

She works at the hospital, yes. She married a girl and her husband---

(She worked at the Seminary?)

Yes, she still working at the hospital. She was at our homecoming, you see.

(She gonna have a baby!)

(Sentence not clear.)

Yes, ah-hum. (Not clear)

(Do you recall Reverend Kevin Jones, Reverend, it was a long time ago.

Reverend Kevin Jones, he was the ah---he worked at the Male Seminary at Tahlequah.)

Oh! That's, ---must of been around 1910. (Not clear) (Arlice, Billy,
