

John's mother and Lillie Mae _____ now they can really give you some history. Their house burnt, you know. (Interruption.)

(We read that in the paper.)

Just five days before my brother died. Nine yeah----my husband been gone now nine years ago. Eight years ago, you see.

(Well those Carlile is kin to Mrs. Tyner. Tyner.)

Tyner. Well, I think where you got that I tell you. Ed Carlile is Jim Tyner's mother's sister married Ed Carlile so there would be no blood kin, you see. That's in here. Have I told Ed's daughter by his first wife. I said, "No, wonder she is afraid she took after her mother."

(Sentence not clear) Of course, her Aunt Grace was a classmate of mine there at the Seminary, you see.

(You went to the Seminary? What year?)

Oh, yes! 1905 through 1910. It was sold in 1909, ---after it's sold. And in the fall of 1910 I went over to the Male Seminary. I had both of so I said none of that and I took out. So I went to work, so then my mother, my youngest brother Billy John was---still going to school. And it burnt, I'd given him all my sheets and everything and I took out. So I left it for him.

(Do you recall Mr. Markham, that went to the Male Seminary?)

Oh, yeah! I know him. He's gonna be president next year, and I hope he does it (not clear) You can tell Jack Brown. In the old time, picnic was people----get together, you know. And they had old Muril Pierce up there talking, he kept on up till twelve o'clock. And someone said, he got sick. And I said, "He oughta to be sick." We didn't need him. And he talked about everything we all knew about. And there we all wanted to visit, they had it down on the campus.
