

And I said, she is nutty. That is just an old rock. I'll carry it off sometimes, when I'm mowing and they don't know it. Now this you see is sister-in-law, my brother's first wife. And she was the sister to Leon Danfel of Tahlequah, and Bertha, I was telling you about. Bertha, Daniel Hinton, she died in '29. And this is my daddy and my mother, I've got to get that stone fix up.

(William and Henryetta?)

Ah-hum. So I had put there granddaughter of Chief John Ross. So I was looking at my dad, and I said, there ought to be something put on papa's. And he was always doing things for other people. So I called him up, and I said, would you mind putting, He Helped Others. And everybody, said, we couldn't have had better, he shaved the men when they was dying and all those things. Ah---this is Lewis Ross's family. And there is you marble table, over on Muriel, first wife. Who is the sister to Jan-John McDonald. And all that is on there, and over here is when he was born near Calhoun, Tennessee, November 15, 1920. He was born the same year my grandmother and the May of 1920, and he died September 19, 1841. And see he was just 21 years-old, and nine months. And that's the reason that it look like it's been cut off. His life was cut off at youth you see. So---these are all the kinfolks, you see.

(This is first?)

That's the first one 1841. First grave---he was gonna build a home here. His father and mother lived farther back down here. And you see Rose Cottage was farther over there. And he had gone up there to visit his Uncle John. And he got sick, so he thought he wasn't get well so his request. That his father-mother, and his father. And his mother's sister over here, you see. Fannie, she married a Nash from Ft. Gibson. So he died in '87.
