

And Elizabeth, you know. That's a double stone. Now here is ah---is cousin Liza's mother and father. And there you see we got---she always went by the name of Liza. She was the one that died in '60 ('16(?) ). (1960. (19(?).)

Can't read that part. I was with her. She didn't know just, she was so conscientious, she didn't know just how old her mother was. And she wouldn't take, I said, can't you take a guess at it. Looks like she ought to know something. It, her daddy was older than her, so her mother always wanted to put on her father's, his record in on higher, and I got the double stone. Mr. Douglas and I went with her, and she got it and I said you can make it pearl, and have the same thing there. Yeah, so her (Shorey?) you see.

((Shorey?))

Shirley (Shorey?) there was, ah---she was the only girl, and old maid. Shirley (Shorey?) and Don and Lewis the one that died. And here is William's, only just one that ever married. And he married, cousin Bill Balentine's sister. And here are the other two girls, (sentence not clear) So wah---they got the Indian money. Roger, that nephew so we got these stone. I went with him, so we got those. So he got one for his--- (Real nice stones.)

Yeah! Got one for his brother, they bought the body back from back east. Wil---William.

(William, uh-huh)

So Roger said then he would be put there. And I said, well.

(These are all (not loud enough).)

(Now here, Bill Balantine's wife was an Antoine?)

Ah-hum! And her folks came from Ft. Gibson. That Mary Watson, over there is
