

--is Brown. So, those are (not clear), so those are---so now Joe Antoine, he's in, he still lives in Muskogee. And Opal is up in Davis's Rest Home. And this is Jones twin children by his first wife. That I didn't know that. And here is Uncle Bob, mama's brother. He and his wife right here. Nave.

(Andrew R.)

Andrew R. Nave.

(Did you call him Bud?)

Mama, and the kids they all called him Bud, Uncle Bud. Is what the kids called him. And this is his oldest son, Tom Nave, over there. I don't why, and this is their little daughter. Some of them in the later year-- the old timer turn them facing the grave. Now, they turn them the other way so if you want to see Tom, who he is you got to turn around and read it from this side. Thomas Nave, January the 20th, he was born the same year Mr. Douglas was, 1877. Died January 2nd, 1942. Now that is Uncle Bud's oldest son. And all of this others up here. Looks like a bunch that changed this time they took up money. Cousin Joanna was Uncle Bud's daughter, you see. She is still living, she and my oldest sister is the same age.

(Where they live?)

Over there on the other lane, as you go straight north. And she got a sister Ella, she's 91 years old. The house that burnt, when she was in, so Joanna said, they took the garage and built them a two room house. But she stays over at Joanna's at night. They're right close together.

((Not clear))

Well, that she was a long when one of my kinfolks married Jim Haney, and that is the first stone that you ever saw, that the date they got
