

married on it.

(The day they got married?)

Yeah! It's on it. And the stone next to it is her son. Dorothy's son, and Jim's first wife. Yeah, I told some of them. I said, I bet I can tell you something about the Ross's that you never seen before. And that here is Susie, the wife of Jim Haney, born July 19, 1881. Died December 2nd, 1906. Married November 21st, 1901. Been married five years, and that little boy is there, you know. That is him right over here. This is the little boy's step daddy. No! That would be his daddy.

(Jim Haney?)

Yeah! Married again, you see. They say that Pearl was in the hospital with a stroke. So I guess she was buried over there. She was born in 1903, you see.

(Not clear) (Were they kin to you?)

No! They're Indian, oh! Let's see here, someways.

(Which one did you go to school with?)

(Not clear) Oh! This is Balentine here. This is kings, now you see that, Minerva King was the sister to my grandfather, you see. And this boy, who is Minerva King and I said, it is your mother's grandmother. That raised us after our mama died, she was just a baby and they nickednamed her Babe. Here's my mother, you know. Her name was Annie, over yonder. And this is Judge King, you see.

(Oh!)

He died in '84, he was 75.

(Riley, Riley Kings)

Ah-hum.

(Kings?)
