

one man said, "Look, what is that?" I guess it was built just like a haystack. And I guess it had barbed wire all around it. "Let's go see," I guess he said. They went over there. They stop. And one of them said, "Hou! Hou!" Like that. I guess this white man come out. I guess he had his hands up. He come out. He come to these Indians and shook hands with them. Then a woman come out. I guess she had kind of a long dress--she was dragging it, they said. A little while after that there was little kids. They was just dirty and white-headed. They come out. And one of the men said, "Hey! That's a spider!" I guess he said.. "That's spider!" And that's why they call this spider "white man!" (Laughs) That was a true story. And I guess they just let him go. They left him. "You're allright, just go ahead," I guess they told him. When they told him that, I guess this white man just cried. That's the reason why we call "Spider" "white man"!
