

like old time. Blanket on. He was old when I see him.

(Below are some comments Myrtle made on pictures I showed her in the book, The Arapahoes, Our People, by Virginia Cole Trenholm.)

This woman, (referring to picture of a woman wearing a war bonnet) was the mother of this Charlie Whiteman that just died not long ago. That's his mother.

(Was she wearing a war bonnet because she participated in the kind of a dance you were talking about?)

No. She was just a chief's daughter.

(What kind of occasions would a lady like this wear her war bonnet in public?)

Well, to show that she was a chief's daughter. And they give away for them. Yeah, her family.

(What was her father's name?)

Hey, I don't know her father. I just know she was married to a man by the name of White Man. I don't know her father.

(Here's another lady with a war bonnet on--that's from Wyoming.)

(Myrtle doesn't comment on this--she looks at picture of Ute.

Old Man Ute.

(Did Ute live at Greenfield?)

He used to live over there east of Geary there.
