

(Who did that work?)

I don't know whose work that is. This is my granddaughter's moccasins. An Indian woman made this for me. (Discussion about beadwork, and who does it among the family.)

(Who is the lady that does this beadwork?)

That's Eya Luther. She's Caddo. And she made me a apron, oh, it's all faded. Everything I got, people give to me. I don't know why. But, I guess it's because I'm so poor. I got a trunk full of shawls and blankets--every one of them been given to me. She told me she had a design, I told her I liked this one. She told me, I'm going to make you a pillow top. And I'm not even using it, it's too pretty to sit on.

(Fairly irrelevant discussion follows.)
