

rooms, separate rooms. East, west, south and north. And north is always the good room. I don't know why. They always call that....

(Is the handgame the same for the Wichita as for the other tribes?)

I don't know, I don't go out. But I always hear them say, certain tribe, they play funny. I don't know how they play. Ask the question, how do they play, they say, play different, play funny.

(Could you tell me how you play the Wichita handgame?)

Yea, they just start off with the two...now, our Pawnees and Wichitas are almost alike. They stand there, and they have to hide whatever it is, sometimes it's a little bone, sometimes it's a little bell. And you know, you can hear bell. Oh, they try to listen close when they use bell. Some of them would move their hand, barely, you can't hear it. I always thought it was fun, you know, when it comes to that kind. Sometimes they have some kind of a bead, or those little...look like little shells, little round ones, like. Well, sometimes it's that, they use, playing, each side....And then they start off, this one on this side, and they both hide whatever they have in their hands.

(How many people are playing on each side?)

Well, they don't have certain number. It's according to how fast they lose. Suppose I lost and you won already along, and we saying we going to play four games. Well, you win all the four, and you know, you win the game, and I lost.

(How many people play with the sticks?)

Two of them. Two that keeps the score, they's the one that have the sticks, you know. They always sit together, and they always know, they tell them, and how many was found, one or two. Alright, they have their sticks together and they put them aside. They can't cheat, anyway, cause they see them.
