

them little balls, and maybe two women, boy, you'd see them running.

(Could they run if they had it hooked on their sticks?)

No. Foul. That's foul. You can't even take one step. You have to take it and throw it. And then when they got it... sometimes, one of them be standing there...it's not like basketball, you can't stand there and hold it...you just have to...try to look for their partners on other side, so they could throw it to them. And you can't hit her when she's got it on her stick, you can't touch it. But you can...when it's on the ground you can fight over it. If one grabs it and picks it up and somebody hits it, oh, that's foul. Oh, they used to watch it. You can't hit them when they got it on their sticks.

(When somebody throws it into the air, can somebody on the other team snag it?)

They can catch it on the air if they can reach it. Maybe this one be throwing to her partner, and somebody happen to be there and catch it, why, it's alright. While it's free, going.

(How do they make a goal?)

Well, it's on the stick. It's easy. They're heavy a little. And the sticks are fat. And when you throw it, it kind of slips off and goes.

(Well, when they make a goal, does one women catch it at the goal?)

No, they's a certain line, the goal. We can see it, way off. When they throw it over that goal, well....

(How long a field do they play on?)

Oh, I would judge just a small...I don't know, I don't know how to count. I got a fence out here, maybe a little ways out. They could play even a short game. They could play big as a football ground. They don't have no limit, they just guess how far they should have. When they have a good players, good runners, they usually stretch it. I tell you why, this ball game used to come up in spring, early part of spring. I said I kind of half way believe, I'm kind of half-
