

try to find out. Like I did now with this here morning star. I know the name of it, but when David asked me, what's the name of the Evening Star...I didn't know. Now yesterday, we all wind up...all the diabetic people...they had their diabetic day in Anadarko here. And I just happened to go over there. I said, I'm getting low on my pills, and I said, I want to get me some more. And my granddaughter said, I have to go in there, get some thing for the kids. And we stopped off at the doctor's office, and there was a bunch of Wichitas in there...they was diabetic. And we got to talking about something like that.

And one of them told me. Did you ever find out the name of the Evening Star. And one of them said, I bet anything, that fellow in there knows the name of it. And I didn't know who it was. And it was Frank Swift. He's a diabetic, and he lost his foot, you know. He's on crutches. But anyway, we went in there. He's my cousin. He came in, he said, I told you he'd know it. Really, did you find out what it is. Yea. I said, what's the name of it. I was all excited because I been wanting to find out, and he said hace?e yasida. Another lady said, but that's Morning Star. And he said, yea, but that's the same name...the same star that goes and appears down there. So, it's the same star. I said, well, I'm going to find out first. You know the white people, they know everything about these stars, about these planets. When they appear...and see if it's the same one. It if's the same one, it's the same name. I said I'll tell the man that's coming...he's from Norman. He'll know it. If he doesn't know it, I'll go to the library.
