

Yeah, it's good that way, too.

(Can you use any part of the animal for barbecuing over the fire--or is there some part that's too tough--?)

Yeah, any part. Well, the neck is the only thing that's too tough. But all of this deer is tender. Boy, I tell you, it's hard to handle when you slice it. It just tears.

(How do you fix the neck?)

Well, we just trim the meat off that neck and I sliced it.

(Then do you boil the bones like you do beef bones sometimes to make soup?)

I never did boil them. As I say, I don't like this deer boiled.

(When they kill a deer like that, do they use the liver or brains or any of that part?)

Yeah, they use the liver and heart. But about the brain, I don't know--I don't think they use the brain.

(What do they do with the head?)

He cut them things off, you know--the antlers--and he throw the head away. That's the second one he's killed. The other one was a little one. He was fixing it before he brought us home. Going to hang it up and use it for hat hangar. Going to put his caps and his hat on there.

(You mean that's the second one he's killed this year?)

Yeah, this is the second one, and it's bigger than the first one he killed.

TEASING A GROWN-UP "GRANDSON"

And Warren G. and Floyd, they went out every morning and come back with nothing! I told Madiline--they come over there--and he gave them some meat--and I told her, "Oh my, your boy's going to bring deer--you going to have lot of meat!" (referring to Floyd). And I told him (Floyd--Myrtle is teasing Floyd) "You know what kind of deer he's going to bring?" "What kind?" she
