

(Yeah.)

But, really, it's the game the Wichitas, you know---

DECISION TO PLAY A GAME

(How often do the women play that game?)

Oh, they don't play too long, you know. They--not in--oh, they can last ten minutes, you know. (laughter) like basketball, you know.

(How--yeah, how often do they play it? How many times?)

Well, whenever they, you know--whenever the woman say, "We're going to."

Somebody's going to put up a game, you know. And they have it, you know.

But when they say they going to put on a game for something.

(Yeah.)

That's about all, you know.

(Yeah.)

They don't know having--just certain time, just what they--whenever they feel like it. People, you know, they get together and talk about it. "Let's do this," you know.

(Yeah, yeah.)

That's the way it work. I don't know, just any time of the year, I guess.

(Yeah. Could anybody start one of those?)

What?

(Could anybody start one of those games?)

Yes.

(Could---)

See, the (not clear) that play, anybody say, "Well, we're going to have this."

(Yeah.)

They don't have no--maybe, they have leaders, I don't know. But they just
