

they brought cattle and I don't know where the cattle came from, they might have come from Old Mexico but anyhow, it was predicted by these old Indians that the white man was coming. In later years they're going to bring a cow, and they're going to start eating it. Today you go to restaurant and the first thing you are going to order is steak. Some kind of meat..that's a cow. And that's the main diet for Indians today. Now, we can't eat no buffalo. There ain't no deer like them old Indians used to eat. If we want to eat deer, you have to go clear to Colorado. And if I want a buffalo, I go clear to Ft. Sill. And I have to buy one. And the only thing I'm going to get..and they even take the hide and the head. They won't give you the head or the hide, but they cost you 90 bucks. Well, when I stop and think how my people knew the white man was coming I don't know how in the world they know, but they knew. And he landed here and the American Indian welcomed him. If the Indian was so mean as they claim he is today, then would wipe them when they landed..would have wiped them off right there at the shore line. But instead..then finally the Quakers came in, Quakers came in that's where your Thanksgiving comes in. The Quakers and the Indians came together made a big feast everybody enjoyed eating, friendship there. Well, the Indian never thought never thought of trouble with the white man. Just let them go on. From the east was the Mississippi River there wasn't too many Indians, but on the west..of course there was some in the north in Minnesota, Wisconsin, in through there, just like I told, that's where we originated. That's where our people used to live, many long years ago. Then it was log days. They had big dogs I guess, great big dogs, to do all their packing. And the children I guess had to..get two poles and build them just like a nest..the kids used to ride in them things and the dogs used
