

What sort of things would he do?)

Well there was no special all that he'd do was use that eagle wing or eagle feather. That's all that I've ever heard. And then if anyone went in there..I know I heard of an instance. They had a meeting down here by Washita, and two fellows went in just for curiosity's sake. So he let them in but they weren't participating in the songs, so he asked them if they wanted to drink of the tea. And which is sacramental of course. They said, well they'd try. And he said, well, he said, "I know you're here just for what you what to find or for what you want to see." He said, "You can just remain refrain from partaking because your desires are not..you just come here for curiosity's sake." That's what he told them. Outright, and he knew what they were there for. And he said that he could read your..whatever's on your conscience. He could really bring it out and just tell you. So that's what he told them.

(Did he touch people with these feathers that he had?)

Uhuh.

(And would they get well then?)

Yes, uhuh.

(Do you know if he would do this while the peyote meeting was going on while people were singing and so forth?)

Well, they didn't exactly have to cause they done that on the outside when..of course if it was an emergency, why you could go ahead and set up a tipi and anything. So he just used his power to..whatever supernatural power he had.

(I think I've seen his picture somewhere.)

Uhuh. My cousin up here, Amy's husband has a picture of him after he was old. I've seen pictures of him when he was young. Of course, we didn't
