

away from their daddy. They went back in the weeds, I guess. And then finally that woman said, "What's wrong with you? You sure got long ears and short nose and you got little tail on you and then you got short legs," she said. "And long legs behind. You sure look funny!" "Oh, that damn coyote! I guess he's the one that fix me up!" he said. He said, "I'm going to look for him," he said. "I'm going to sure fix him!" he said. And then he went again. He went again. He left his family and look for that coyote. Well, I guess this coyote just keep travelling and got tired, and then this rabbit just keep running, running. Finally he find him. Find him laying in the weeds. "Well, here you are! I'm gonna fix you up!" And then finally he went to him. And he pulled his face--his nose--it's kinda long. And his ears, you know. So now a coyote's ears is kinda short and round. And then he kinda pulled his body, you know. Kinda pull his body. Made it long--right in here--his belly. He push it in. Kinda got small, you know, waist in here. Kinda no stomach. Kinda push it up to the front. And then pull his tail long, and make it fuzzy. Then kinda push his legs up, you know. Kinda made it short. "Oh, you look nice!" he said. And then this rabbit run off. And then a way after a while that coyote got up and just stretch himself. He said, "Ah,--" He feel himself. He don't feel the way he felt before, you know. He feel funny, you know. Well, he said, "I'm gonna go back and see my family." He went back home and then when he was--got like that rabbit. When he come back to where his home (is)--these little coyotes all run away from him. "Something's coming! Something's coming! It sure looks-- It's got long tail and no stomach and long face," they said. "It's gonna eat us up!" they said. They all run to their mother and got around their mother and she said, "Gaw, that's your--hey--what you come for?" she said. "Oh, I'm your--all's father! I'm your husband!" he said. She said, "No! You don't look like my husband! You look bad!" she said. And this woman kinda argue with him. And then the little ones run away from him. And then finally he said, "Well, I guess that rabbit done it!" He knows that rabbit done it. And then
