

here, I guess.

(It's forehead?)

Yeah. Forehead. And he said he was going and get buffalo. Oh, I guess everybody went out and I guess he went around the camp four times. He started west. They all followed him. He got to that place there. And my-grandma used to tell us--I think he went around that first hill. He went around it from the right side. Come through. And I guess it opened and here a buffalo come out. Come out and I guess they kill what they could get. And all at once everybody had plenty of meat to eat. He didn't want the kids to starve or anything. They were hard up, I guess. And I guess what they didn't kill, it went back in there. My grandma used to tell us. His name was White Hawk. -- háeyè.nó.k(ω) I guess he's the one that got the buffalo out there and they all had plenty to eat. I guess in the camp there was just lot of meat around. You know how they slice it and hang it up. And they said it sure was wonderful. I guess he went and took all his clothes off. He just paint (himself)--red. And he went. They all watched him. Boy, I guess that horse really went fast.

(This is when they were camping east of buffalo mountain?)

Yeah. Way east down there somewhere. They call it "Nine Mile Creek." That's where they were camped, I guess. And from there he went and got buffalo.

(You said he went around this first hill?)

Yeah, he went around from the right side, and he come, and then he kind of went west and he face his horse towards that hill. And maybe he prayed, or something--They were all distant, you know. Boy, I guess it was just like it opened and buffalo come out. And they kill lot of them, I guess. That was the last buffalo we ate, she said. That was the last.

(Which grandmother was this?)

My mother's aunt--Pumpkin.

FASTING TO GET POWER

(Was this White Hawk a medicine man?)

Yeah, he was a medicine man. You know--on that hill they used
