

I always go, "I want some corn." I know they had corn.

(Yeah.)

That's first thing she give me. She says, "Didn't you hear that Red Bird?"

(Yeah.)

(laughter) (not clear)

(Yeah, yeah.)

"Ah," he says, "I'm going to tell you nothing." "No, I'm going to give you corn." So, she give it to me.

(Yeah, yeah.)

That's was--that's a--words are kind of a joke, you know.

(Yeah.)

Sounds like a joke, but it's a word, I guess. I don't know where that come from. Go after--go borrow some corn or something like that. You want corn. See? That's what they give you. "Did you hear a Red Bird at springtime?" (laughter) We all went--I don't know, we went through pretty good (not clear). I don't know too much, you know, these old-- I don't know. But you could tell me, you know, these.

(Okay.)

What you can do.

WICHITA TRIBE AND PAWNEE TRIBE EXCHANGE VISITS

(Yeah. I wonder, today, could we--could we talk about the--when the Wichita and Pawnee visited each other?)

Oh, yeah.

(Can you tell me something about that?)

Well.

(I was out there last year, but I didn't--I didn't see all of that.)

Yeah, I know. Yeah, well, it's--now, just like I said this morning, I
