

Come home, and they had--they had, you know, dance for him, you know.

(Yeah.)

TURKEY DANCE - WORSHIP - MANY SONGS

And they dance that Turkey Dance. They had a pole in the middle like them Caddos. Had a scalp on top of the head of the pole, scalp was.

And that's a--it's a--well, I might say it's a powerful dance. You know, it's for the--well, all them dances we use, it's, you know, powerful.

(Yeah.)

It's powerful for everything, you know. It's kind of a way for worship, you know. And what this Turkey Dance, they use it for when anybody comes home from a war, you know. They dance that.

(Is that like--is the dance like the Caddo Turkey Dance or is---?)

Yeah, it's--it's same thing, but, you know, they (pause)--yeah, they had this Turkey Dance. There's another (pause)--well, I don't know what they call it, but our tribe calls it Dog's Songs.

(Mmm-hmm.)

And they're good songs too. I--I seen them. They sing that kind.

(Yeah.)

You know, they sit around, you know. One of the--the time I saw them, they use little drums.

(Mmm-hmm.)

Yeah, gourds, you know, they was--have you seen these round gourds look like a doughnut?

(Like peyote gourds?)

Yeah, yeah, but it's--I think it's made out of hide.

(Oh, oh.)

Yeah, hide, you know. We had--my mother had one once, but I think McCarters
