FIRST SEGMENT: SAINDAY AND A BIRD EXCHANGE PENISES; THEN SAINDAY ATTENDS ATTENDS A DANCE HELD BY A GROUP OF MICE INSIDE A BUFFALO SKULL

He's talking about, he said one of them big shots had a daughter: I guess her husband died or something. Anyway she was a widow. She wasn't married. So they come out in the camp and he said, "Hey, I've got one daughter, and I want somebody to marry her." So naturally, Sainday was there, So he said, "Hein!" Sainday said, "Hein!" "Here I am. I'll take her up," he said. "I'll marry her. I'll take your daughter for a wife." So her daddy said, "All right." And he showed him where that camp was. That's the one way up there," he said. So he went up there. The next morning, they sat down to eat breakfast, him and his new wife. And while they were sitting there, well her mother was there. And this little bird came up, I guess, and he was talking to Sainday. And he said, "Hey! Is Sainday here?" And Sainday's mother-in-law said, "Yeah, he's here." And so he said, "Well, I've sure got good news for him! I'm going to trade him something! He's always willing to give up anything. I'm going to trade him something," He meant he's going to trade his...(Evelyn laughs, because story is that the bird was going to exchange his penis for Sainday's.) was going to exchange with that bird. Get Sainday's "what-you-call-it." That bird was going to give it to him. Call it "soap." (Laughs again) "Mine is little," the bird said, and Sainday is always willing. That pretty girl won't like him," he said. So he did. And Sainday went swimming and he told his wife, he said, "I've got to go to the creek. I've got to clean up," he said. "I'm going down to the creek," he said. When he came up to that bank he run into a buffalo head. It was laying there. I guess it's been eaten, you know. But inside of it, boy, they were having a big dance in there. So he said, "Hein!" I want to
