

have anything special to say about them.)

Well, he--he thought they were dangerous, like the lions, and elephants and like that. Then he mentioned to me, they served coffee. And he asked me where they get the water? And I told him they got it out of Lake Overholser. And he won't drink it after that. He didn't know it was purified, see. Now he said, he won't drink that river water. /laughter/ He was kind of way up in age.

(Do you know how old he was about this time?)

Well, 1928, he was around eighty years old.

(Around eighty years old?)

Yeah. But he's deceased now, you know.

ANECDOTE - LITTLE HAND DELEGATE TO WASHINGTON D.C.

(Do you remember any other things -- stories he told you?)

Well, he was telling me one time, they went to a Washington D.C. as a delegate of the Cheyenne chiefs. And you know how they set a banquet table with a table cloth. And one of the chiefs, his name was Two Crows, and when he went to sit down, He pulled the whole tablecloth. Just spilled anything. He was telling me about that.

(Just accidentally, or did he just didn't know what it was and wanted to get it out...)

Didn't know what it was...

(And just wanted to get it out of the way, huh?)

And they put this finger bowl--water, you know. They start to drinking that. Some--her step-daddy was named Robert Burns. And he told 'em, that was for their--put their fingers in there before they eat. And they wondered why was the white man do that, you know! /laughter/
