

Well, the only ones that I've heard complain about anything are some of the Indian preachers, are the only ones.

(Why don't they like it?)

Oh they say, it's a bad thing that we should waste our time going to church and instead of just out having a good time.

(Ok, well--these young people that attend the Forty-Nine Dances, do they do anything else besides dance?)

Well....

(Do they dance all night?)

Uh-huh...About half of them dance all night and the other half goes to look for a bootlegger.

(Oh really!)

Uh-huh.

(Don't they sort of come in and stay for awhile and then leave?)

Uh-huh.

(...and then come back?)

Uh-huh...yeah. They dance for awhile and then--I don't know why they get out and then they leave and then come back again.

(Seems like there's always people coming and going. But do the singers generally stay there all night?)

Uh-huh, the singers usually stay there all night and there are a few new ones that come in and sing for a while. And I have noticed here lately that they take out time for breaks.

(Oh they do?)

Then they stand around and smoke.

(They just have sort of a rest period.)

Uh-huh. I just seen that done last summer. That's the first time I seen it done was last summer.

(Do they ever have these dances in the middle of the week?)
