

I seen him standing there and I asked him if he wanted to dance with us and he said after while. So I kept dancin and finally I asked him again. So he got in and then we start dancing, and so the girl that he had brought, well, she came up and she said that she wanted to talk to him. He got out and he went to talk to her, and then he came back and kept dancing. That's how I met Harold.

(And then that ended up that you all started going together and then you got married?)

Well, yeah, let's see it was during last July, I seen him and I was going up to the fair grounds, and he asked me if I wanted a ride, and so I said, "Yeah." So he took me on up to the fair grounds, but I didn't ever think that I'd go with him. And then when he was in Germany, he came home on leave in December, and I seen him then, but I still didn't think anything. So after that Walters Dance was over, he said that he'd come and see me. I didn't believe him; but he did. We went together for quite a while before we were married.

(Did you dance quite awhile at the dance down the e at Walters?)

We danced all night.

(Until about five o'clock?)

Until about five.

(Arm and arm?)

Arm and arm.

(But you didn't have a blanket over you?)

No, I didn't have a blanket. I told him now I felt--"That I don't want to get whipped over you."

(What about this girl that he was with?)

Yeah, this girl, she kept bothering him. So he just came right out and told her. He said, "what you do from now on is your business." He said, "I'm tired of putting up with your drinking." He said, "So you can go on!" She kept coming back, but he finally--I don't know what happened to her. I didn't even get to bed until about 6:30 and then at that I didn't even go to bed--I just stayed
