

baptised one summer by the mountains. There was a big spring..that's the place. There was a church there too. [That was a Baptist Church; Saddle Mountain. (What was the name of the spring?)

It's just there and I don't know that there's any name for it. And that spring water goes a long way, you might say, I don't know how many miles, it keeps a running. Must be a good spring. And people around there close they always dig a hole by the side of the ..even if it's a river they always check around and see water running on top like that, well they'll dig a hole. They didn't have any wells they have to carry water from so many miles. Again they don't haul it; they have to carry it in buckets, maybe two buckets of water, long ways. And when they were in tipis they have a fireplace made, where they make fire and keep their tipis warm and cook in there too. But later on when they put them houses up they showed them how to get stoves. You know, and put them through the chimney. and that's where they learned how to use stoves. And later on, the first stove I saw had just two tops and so high (about 2½ft.). Oh, I just thought it was funny, it was a funny stove. And I just thought the what is it for and we shouldn't think like that, but I was afraid of it. I'm always like that. I have to be told before I try to..I won't even make no fire myself. But I can in a tipi. One time I go out and pick up them, you know, when they're makin houses, they'd saw and those little piles of (shavings?) Yes, I'd pick them up, I'd take them in the tipi, I'd put them in the fire. And that don't last long. It's just like burnin paper. But they had wood ready even by the a pile of wood. It would be piled up so high, as far as we could reach. So it would be ready all the time. After they had their wood piled up. I don't know if they had axes at that time, but they would take a stick of wood and they'd step on it and it would kinda break in half, and then that's the wood they have ready for the fire, you know.
