

Nobody get tired, you know. Well, these two, my uncle and my grandfather, they play seven, seven, seven games, seven games. Well, the seven games, I don't know how they play it, but regular, you know, every one has different ways of, you know, playing.

(Yeah.)

Seven, these seven, well, when they play seven, this is kind of represent seven stars. Then top, you know, that's what they, well sometimes, they, they start on one game. Maybe, one of them, see, they kind of put them in a hole, they call it.

(Yes.)

Maybe, win one game. They stick a stick, you know. Well, maybe, maybe, second game, maybe same side winning there. Well, they put another stick in there. I don't know. Maybe, well say we -- it go to four. We go to four. Well, them other side ain't got nothing in the hole yet. But they play seven game.

(Yes!)

Well, this other bunch, maybe, they win a game. See, they going to take out, take, you know, the scores out.

(Yeah.)

And one of them got four. Well, this other side win the game, well, they take this one. They take one of them off of the, you know, off of the four.

(Yeah.)

Well maybe, they win again, they'll take this one out, just like that, you know, until they get all of them out, you know. It's just like a new game again. One of them got to, you know, put in seven before they win a game, and it takes a long time. Sometimes you know, they play til midnight. You know, that's all long time, you know, winters.

(Yeah, yeah.)
