

STORY ABOUT HOW SAINDAY COOKS AND EATS HIS OWN LEG; HIS ADVENTURE WITH THE WHIRLWIND WOMAN, AND HOW HE TRICKED THE PRAIRIE DOGS AND GOT TRICKED
BY COYOTE; SAINDAY PLAYING WITH THE SUN

He is telling about when he was a young boy way back. He is talking about this--you call it "coyote," you know but the Kiowas call it "Sainday."

He said, when I was a young boy they talk about him. They used to tell stories about what different things he run into. He said one day that he was just laying there just crying over nothing. He must have been miserable about something. So he said, "I'm going to jump off this high cliff." So he did. This Sainday did. He jump off this high cliff and he broke his leg. So when he broke his leg he cut it off and started eating this marrow. So while he was eating it he said, "Ah, it's really good. I believe I will make a fire," he said. So he drug himself around, and he made fire, and he cooked the meat which was on the leg of the bone.

He cooked that meat. And he was eating it with that marrow and he said, "Gee, it's good! I believe I will break my other leg!" So he jumped up and did it the same way again. So he did the same thing. So when he got through, he come to, and he said, "Well, I am sitting right here and now, and I'm sure enough miserable," he said. "I don't have no legs. What am I going to do?" he said. "I'll just wish for another pair of legs," he said. So, he said, he got him another pair of legs. And then he started walking you know. He got so far and he said he met this pretty woman in the woods, where he was walking. And this woman said, "Hey, where you going?" she said. He said, "Ah, I'm just moseying along you know." And he asked her "What you doing?". She said, "I'm just walking around, too." So, he said, "Well, let's get married," he said. This woman said, "I'm too much trouble. I'm always getting into something," she said. "You
