

too, every little while." So when those ladies dropped that rope, and start hitting them poles, he grabbed that first lady, you know, and tried to down her. But all those mens come in on him, you know. And they really had a fight right there, you know. They said, "Oh, you Sainday! You sure like to cheat," they told him. So they really whip him right there. (Another segment of T-71 played.)

SAINDAY TURNS HIMSELF INTO A PUPPY AND LEARNS THAT ONE MAN HAS BEEN HOARDING BUFFALO WHILE THE CAMP STARVES

He said they come up to another camp. It was during the winter, and it was the same way. They didn't have much to eat. So Sainday was in the bunch. This tipi that was sitting up, this man lived there with his wife and little girl, you know. So everybody would always go out and hunt, you know. And this man--it seemed like every time somebody would visit him they would smell something, you know--just like some meat cooking. Or it smelled like grease in that tent, you know. So people began to talk about him. Said, "Hey, that man over there, camping over there--everytime we go in there or get close to his tent it smells like he's cooking meat. And the rest of us are starving. I wonder what he is doing. He don't get the rest of the men to go out and hunt with him," they said. So he had a tunnel made, this man. It wasn't Sainday--it was another man. It was a big tunnel. And he had a big buffalo chip, dried up, laying over that tunnel. So Sainday went in there and he said, "Hey, I've come to smoke with you. Those mens always come up here to smoke with you and they always say they smell meat or something cooking. What's the matter? Maybe you go hunting, and you don't take the rest of them?" "No," he said. "I've just got enough meat to take care of my wife and my little girl." So the next day they say, "Well, we are going to move. We can't find no kind of game to kill.
