

(Did you get married again after that?)

I divorced him. When our little boy was that big. He was going on two years old.

(What happened? Did everything just work out bad?)

Oh, he got so that he wouldn't stay home. Just kept running around, running around. Kept going long time and finally he went with another woman and I just divorce him. My mother told me, "You can't keep him now, he's got another woman. Go get your divorce." And I did.

(Were you married in the Indian way or the Christian way?)

I married him by law. I married him up here at the church.

(Now was that the same year you got out of school?)

Yes, the same year I got out of school I got married to him.

(Now about how many years after you were married did you.....)

I live with him seven years and then I divorced him.

(And all this time you lived.....)

All this time we were living over there.

(What did he do?)

He didn't do nothing. He didn't work. But in the spring, my father would put in corn and he would cultivate that, get the weeds out of it, but when its layed by, its through, well then he start running around. That' all he does.

(When did you get married again after that?)

About two years after. No, I divorced him that spring and I got married in...another man...in July. I divorced him early in the Fall, and the next July I got married to another man. In the year of 18.

(When you were 18?)

That's when I was married to him.

(What was his name?)

Jerry Saupitty