

Well, they always believed in God. They never did have no other symbol of religion outside of the..because they always prayed to God. Because in the old days when man or a woman did something she swept off the fireplace and she stands to the east and offers a prayer to there were ever anything done for that day. Now that used to be the custom. I use to see often my grandma do it. Nobody gets up. She gets up and tends to the fire and then she swept all that around the fireplace, which was always clean and then she'd stand to the east and offer up a prayer, whether it's a long prayer or a short prayer depending on the..and then that was that. Same way of the evening. When we all get together sitting around then before we retire there's always a prayer offered.

(Did you do that yourself?)

Yes, it's customary.

(Is it still done today?)

Some of them do.

(Uhuh, are there any other special times when people pray?)

Well there's always occasions for prayer you know. Inunison if it's necessary.

(What about eating? Do people pray before they eat?)

Yes they do.

(Do they pray at night before they go to bed?)

A lot of them do, depending on the individual.

PET KEEPING:

(What kind of animals did your family keep? I know you told me about cows. Did they keep any other animals?)
