

I see that boy, you know--well, he's still kind of cripple, but he gets around. Well, he's grown up man now.

(Yeah.)

But that was his brother, you see?

(Yeah, do they do that during the race?)

Yeah, see they're coming, you know, when the race has started. And he's going to finish, you know.

(Joe, when they, when they, who fixes that medicine before the race that gives it to the runners?)

Oh, he don't give it to everybody. I just seen him give it to this boy, but them others, I don't know, might have it. You know, just like I say, might have some kind of other medicine.

(I see.)

See, they all--they all use some medicine. They use it. Well, everybody uses it, but they have for different things, you know.

(Yeah, yeah. What--what--what time you say they said they--they did this in the spring?)

Early in spring, early in the spring, you know, when it's just now green-ing up, you know, because I seen them. Some of them, you know, they carry this little sage, they call it.

(Yeah.)

Well, this sage, they use in these meetings.

(Yeah.)

Did you ever go to the meetings?

(Yeah.)

Well, they have it. It's white.

(Yeah.)
