

"Ka-sant."

(Will you say it once more?)

"Ka-sant."

(And how about the stick?)

"Kaues," I'm say stick, you know. I'm not saying "shinney stick." We call it "Kaues," you know, when it's a stick. (static)

(Yeah, okay.)

Unidentified voice: What did the players wear?

(Yeah, I asked him that. They wear breech cloths.)

Unidentified voice: Oh, in this game too?

(Yeah, oh, in this game. No, that's right. What--what--what the players wear when they play shinney? What did they have on? What did they wear when they play shinney?)

Well, they just wear, you know, clothes or (not clear). One man, you know, wearing that cloth, you know, through his legs. I just saw one man. Might have been some more. I don't know. You know, they dressed just like Indian way, you know. They wear different color shirts, you know.

(Yeah, I see.)

Maybe, if you want to wear leggings, it's all right, you know.

Unidentified voice: Did they wear shoes?

Well, they wear moccasins, you know. Some of them--

(Some go barefoot? Did some of them--did some of them go barefoot when they play?)

Well, yes, sometimes, you know, when--maybe, he got heavy shoes and take them off. But they wear some kind of moccasin, you know.

(Yeah, yeah.)

They wear them, but they're slippery, you know, moccasins.
