

No, I--I--

(---look like that?)

My dad, he puts some on his.

(Yeah.)

He just done that, you know. He--he put one about that long, I think, but he has to split the wood, you know.

(Yeah.)

It wasn't sharp, but he just split the wood, and stuff the point in there, the metal.

(Yeah.)

Stuck it in there, and made it right. He tied it with sinew.

(Yeah.)

Stay on, you know.

(What shape was that metal he put in?)

What?

(What shape--what was that piece of metal shaped like?)

Oh, it's sharp.

(I mean, did it--did it look---)

Yeah, something like that.

(---something like arrow point?)

Yeah, yeah. No, I don't think they use--they didn't use much on that arrows they call, you know. Some of them, I see them put it on arrows.

They didn't use that. Any time good seasoned arrows, you hit a person, it'll go through. (laughter)

(Yeah, yeah, I'll bet.)

Hurt too.

(What--what kind of feathers did they use?)
