

(What was it?)

It was a boy.

(What did they do when it was born? Did the doctor do anything besides just stand around?)

Well, he...I guess he dressed it like the doctors do and...

(Did you have hard labor?)

No. Just normal.

(Were you afraid when you got the pains?)

Yes. I didn't know what, but I soon found out what it was.

(Did your husband go get somebody?)

Yes. He went after his mother and his aunt.

(Was it at night?)

Yes, it was dark. No, early in the morning. About noon.

(Were you afraid while he left you there all by yourself?)

No.

(How long were you in labor?)

Oh, I guess--I think I started about early in the morning and about noon the baby was born.

(The doctor was there?)

Yes.

(Did he give you any drugs or anything?)

I guess he must have given me a shot or something.

(You weren't awake when the baby was born?)

No, uh-huh. In all of them they give me a shot. That didn't help it.

(The first baby was born at home?)

Uh-huh. All of them. I have had all of mine at home.

((Not clear)) and my mother-in-law took care of me and told me what to do then:
