

((She's looking through the book for a song.))

Now which page is that one. If I can find it I will...I haven't singed in so long...

(Are those Creek songs?)

What kind do you mean, Indian songs?)

(Any song that they sing.)

I just know church songs. I don't know. I haven't looked at the book in so long, I can't...

(When did you learn how to read Creek?)

My uncle send me a first reader and I studied it. And I loaned that book out and I don't know who I loaned it to - I don't know where it went to. It was some white people.

(Mrs. Robinson has one of the books.)

She has? Well, I was trying to find out. Is this here the book or is it...

(Do you know who first wrote this, Muskogee (not clear))

Well let's see. I read it somewhere but I don't know. I will sing, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

SINGS: ABOUT 3 MINUTES LONG

(That's good. Do they sing in Creek in meeting, church meeting?)

Uh-huh. They's just church songs.

(Do the younger people know them?)

No, there isn't enough people know how to talk Creek.

(Just the older people?)

Uh-huh, older people. I think our language is going to go out if the younger people don't learn how to talk.

MORE ABOUT FATHER'S CHURCH SERVICES.

(What was the services like when your father preaches a sermon?)
