

didn't have no implements. But we got team. We bought another mare team.. great big mare team. And they was to bring some..and another team we got for a buggy team. We got buggy go to town. Finally we managed to buy a model T. We got Model T. And we had bunch of children. And I lost all the children, all but one..Eugene Hummingbird, you might say. He's in California now.

(How many children did you and Hiram have?)

Oh, I had about eight. Yea, eight.

(Did any of them grow up or did they all die young?)

STORY OF DEATH OF A DAUGHTER:

Oh, one or two of them had children. Oldest one had two children. Had TB they said and she died. And another one..I had three girls, rest of them boys. And this girl, I raised her and she got to running around... you know Arbutus Key..well it's her mama. And she got her and her cousin they went somewhere and he got mad, and come around to Carnegie. Course he's at Lawton. He come to Carnegie and he asked me where is she. And Arbutus was about six months old. And I said, I don't know, I thought she..you had her. He said no, she never come back. Now he's mad. He stalked the floor, boy I was scared. Alright, and he went away hunting for her. He went Mountain View, Carnegie, and everywhere else where he know where she likes to go, you know. Never find her. And when, August 5th..that's where he find her. Find her brought her home. Alright, he said, we going to Oklahoma City, buy the baby some clothes. Load her up. About that time we went to Apache Y and from there we was going to Lawton. There was Lawton's birthday..August 6th. And she got off over there at Y waiting for him. He call her down wait for him,
