

front, for him to name him and this child's name is that one, who people could no. And this woman, who would ..the grandparents would give away some good, anything they could give away to some people in the crowd.

(Is this both sets of grandparents that was, or was it just..)

Yeah, it was both sets. Both sides give away to the people that was in the crowd. Yeah, that's the way they do.

CHILDBIRTH:

Well, when the first, when the girl have the first child you know, well a lot of them talk to her, to be brave to go through because it's painful. Well she try to stand it but all right, sometimes girls can't stand it and scream and cry and you know, but the old ladies keep talking to her, to be brave to go through and pretty soon you have have baby, pretty soon you see baby and they urge her, you know, so she could stand it. And when she had, oh, I'll say several pains, you know cause pain don't go but five minutes, and on and on, but finally come closer, closer and harder pain come. Finally it hits you know to go through and this girl, well she just quiets down bear down and go through with it. When this child's born, why they just let her lay there and they get the old lady to cut the navel. They got string you know and they tie it on both ends of that cord, they tie this side and that and after that they take the baby away. And after that why they get the afterbirth out. And when they get it out, why they put it in a bucket or something, carry it away. And this baby, they don't wash in them days. They have grease, you know and grease it all over. They tie that cord, bandage it up, they tie it up you know, they nowadays just put blanket over it and lay it
