I want to go out." All right, he said and when they got close to him well this little boy cried. And she said, "Oh, what you want?" What you want? What's my grandchild want?" Well he said he wanted to go to the toilet. And she said, "All right, you can sit by the door, it's too dark." And this boy said, "No, I might stink everybody out. I want to go out." So she said, "Well, go out, sit by the door." And as soon as they got out the door, they beat it, they started going, running as fast as they could. And about that time it's morning and they just went to over the hill, I'll say about half a mile because this little boy when he got tired, why she carried him back. But he get too heavy for her, but around on the hill there's this man sitting there at the edge of the water, running, deep, high water after a big rain, I guess. And they said, "He's hacking on a stick or something," and they went over told that man, "Here, this old lady's following us with big butcher knife, and here she's going to kill us. Help us to cross this creek." And he said, Oh, children you all could run." They said, "No, no, save our lives. This old lady is coming pretty close." And he said, "All right, look in my head," he said. This man sitting down happened to be a big, long grasshopper, you know, turned man and making arrow. "All right, " he said, "Look in my head and if you can find bug in my head, but there's goin g to be four." "All right, well here's one." "Put it in your mouth and eat it." He asked them what it taste like. "Oh, it taste like a plum." "Another one." "Oh, it tastes like grapes." And all that good stuff, he made it four of them. "All right", he said , "you children come close." And he looked and that old lady was coming and he put his leg across the water where the water flowing because the creek was up so he put his leg across, and these children there was two of them, they walk on his leg. And when he crossed them, why they went on. And this old lady, about that time she came down there and she sure was mad. She said, "Hey, what's you
