

big rain, and a lot of water. Anyhow, he didn't care. He dive in the water and he went across the river and he went way off some-where and hide in them..in some kind of bushes. And all like that. And he hide in the wood drift over there, he hide in there, and in the night why the parents always go over there and hunt for him and take him something to eat. And he stayed there a long time And these people, they all got mad after they buried this dead man, and they can't find this man. And they wish to kill him, but they can't find him and finally way lately on this man used to just hide around all the time. And the people, the old parents, said, "Well, let's make it good with him someway." And in them days horses was as good as money and we think a lot of money now, but, in them days, horses took it's place and they put up a lot of balnkets anything and they put up a lot of things horses, all kinds, and went to their camp and told them that and took a pipe , you know, they said a peace pipe, he took it over there and let them smoke it and told them not to not to have to be enemies anymore. "let's be all friends. Be good." And they gave him smoke and he smoked, the people, that mans' people, and when he spoke they gave him a lot of horses and a lot of goods. A lot of things. And they treat them good. And that's where they're enemies isn't it.? They don't fight anymore. What this man did, then was hide all the time. This Kiowa man was named Bigbow. He just died here lately. But he's got son living, Able Bigbow. But he's blind, yeah, that where they went and finally they became friends, but Apaches and Kiowas always stick together, always hang around together. When any war is coming up or something like that, well they always be together. Yeah, they hang around together all the time. Yeah, that's the way I know.
