

Well, the mother of the boy would, well, she took stuff over here on the girl's side, talk to them, say that their (not clear).

(And then what do they do? Same thing with the boy's parents?)

No, they don't say nothing on the boy's side.

(And that's all there was to the ceremony?)

That's all there was to the ceremony and we came back home. Come home and I've been here ever since.

(Was it this house?)

No, it was something like a small cabin. I've lived here many years in the summer.

(This is the house--)

No, it was something like a small cabin, but we've always lived here. And we use to camp right out here. Out by the cemetery. They lived in a tipi, they didn't live in a house. And we got married November 24th--

(1930?)

Uhuh. And then at Christmas, at Christmas before they had my wedding, they moved down here. They had a big camp, you know--

(Before your wedding?)

Uhuh. And the next year, in 1930, that's when they had that wedding. Oh, I guess it was about March, about March when they had that wedding and then that following year, well, his mother died in June.

(His father died--)

No, his grandfather died in December, and then his mother died. I was married to him not near a month when his grandpa died at Christmas. And then in June, his mother died. And then in the next year, his little brother died.

(How did his mother die?)
