

it was really my father wanted me to marry, and then, my mother said, "Well, it's up to you." And then my brother, you know, he understand he went to school and he said, "No, don't do that to her, because them things are gone, what you all done to your daughters and your boys. We all going to get married to anybody we want." That's what my oldest brother told my mother and my daddy too. So they didn't say anything and they just quite talking about it, you know.

(How old were you when your father wanted you to get married?)

I'd say about sixteen, when he wants me to marry just anybody that he wants, not me.

STORY III:

(Would you like to tell another story?)

This man, you know, he had a wife, and they lived together and she had mother and dad, but he didn't have no parents, you know, he was kind of a middle-aged man, you know, and he'd go hunting and his wife, she'd always just kind of fuss with him everytime he went hunting. And they had a dog, a big old dog, long dog, nowadays I hear people say, "There's a hot dog." You know, with a long body and they had that kind of dog. And every time when this man would go after the horses, or go drum, sing with the men you know, they had a tipi and every night the mens would smoke and talk about their leaders and talk about how many's going to war up that way and who's going and you know, they had to tell their chief about it before they're going and he know when they're going and when they're coming here. Lots of thimes they go and they don't come back. They get killed over there. For the longest time when her husband would go and sing with the mens over there this dog would be laying with this woman. This is just between un because we're womans, and she would
