

lie with this dog and finally she got pregnant, with this dog, great big old dog, long one. And that time she would watch her husband go take off, and she'd run in that tent and just lay down with that dog. And after a while she got big, her stomach got big, and she said to her husband, she was laying with him, her husband feel her like this and her husband said, "Oh, I'm so glad, we're going to have a baby." That's what her husband said and all the time she was in there and she kept it to herself. She didn't say nothing. And finally there was a time come that she had pain in her stomach and ...of, first he said, "Oh," she rubbed her stomach like that she was laying down like that. He said, "Hey, you know what? This little thing it just sit over here, and then after a while here's another one over here. Maybe you're going to have twins." That's what he told her and she said, "I guess I'm going to have twins." That's what she said, finally that one moved this way and another one moved this way and all the time those dogs were moving inside of her. Little puppies. And then finally she had pain and she was going to have babies, and her mother said, "Well, since your' going to have baby, we'll fix a little tent way over there, away from people and the camp and we put your tent way over there and you have your baby over there. I and your grandma, we just go over there and wait on you and we won't have to come back to the folks here when you have your baby. After ten days you can get up and be able to come back to the folks." And her husband was in that tent, close to the other peoples and he slept there and finally he went to the door of this little tent they had, her mother was there and her grandmother and he come to the door and said, "How is my wife? Has she got baby yet?" And they said,
