

for shelter. I'm going to bless you and give you something and when you get back home, you use it." And he meant by that, that you could do good to the people when they're sick. You are going to doctor them. And you're going to be blessed and by doctoring, the people, they give you. They bless you with horses, blankets or things. That way you can get whatever you need. That's the way this thing talked to her. So next morning, when the daylight came and the sun came out and, oh, she was so happy cause this buffalo said she's going to get home. He's going to bless her to come to her people and home again and she was so happy about that. So, next morning she got out of there and was just happy and then she went on and went on for I don't know how many days and then finally she came and found a camp and came to her tribe. And when they saw her way off, they just wondered, you know. You hear of a story how Indians are. They go way out and watch around. Well, that's the way some young men just stay out to watch around to see if there's anything coming, they tell the camp. And that's the way this-- there was young men out there watching around and they seen something coming way off. They watch it and it got closer and they rode back to the camp. They told the campers to be ready, there was something coming--might be an Indian. This thing didn't get scared, just came on. She believe that that buffalo, dead buffalo, bless her already to get home. She came and when she got closer they see who she was, that young woman that was lost a long time. They heard about her. That's who she is, coming back home. And then they went back and told the campers and they all came out to meet her. And when she came closer to the camp, she stopped way out there.
