

they would grow up about so high those little bears. Finally the spring came around and she thought, "Well, I guess I start back home. When the sun come up, I'm going to walk that way. The way I did, I came so far." Everynight she would lay down and the next morning she would start walking. She came to that cave when it got cold. She told those little bears, "I'm going to leave you all. I'm going home to my folks. You all stay here with your daddy." and they got mad and they just jump at her and hit her like that and hold onto her, but she went, she got out, she run. She run and all those bears just followher screaming and yelling and finally she went long ways and these little bears got tired and they stopped and they would stand up on two feet and they would look at her and she was going and they would just scream and holler and fall over when they get mad. They got up and look at her and she turned back and looked at them and they still following her, and she went long ways till it got dark and after it got dark, I guess they went back or either that big bear came after them and they walked and walked and walked and it got dark again so she rested and the next morning she got up early and she look around and there was no bears left. Then three little bears was hers. She took off and waoked and walked and walked I don't know how far she went and she climb mountains and go up and down and she keep coming, keep coming until it got real warm and finally she come to a place and there was a house. She walked to the house and there was a god bard at her and growl at her but she just keep coming and finally a man come out there and he was a Mexican man and she talked to that man but he couldn't understand her and he came out there and took her to the house and she...
