

(Well, that was nice.)

And we stayed there at the Hotel Savoy--stayed that whole week. And he paid all of it. And they had a Cattleman's Convention at that year there and they showed us stock and everything. And every night there, they showed us at the Fairground, I guess it is, pretty horses and cows. Stock was showed there. And some of them pretty horses had electric lights mounted on their harnesses on the side. Well, I said, "That's the originator of your herd here." So he said, "Well, we've got big herds now, and I want your picture here." "Well," I said, "If you want the whole story," I said, "You go to the Denver Post and look in the old files and you'll find it." "Oh," he said, "I want you to go with me to the Post, where they print the paper and let's look over the files so you can look at it." So after he took our picture, me and Allen, we went over there to the Denver Post and went over files--find all those files and the pictures. And I said, "Now you got the whole story right there. I don't need to tell you anything." And he wrote quite a bit in a little pamphlet about three or four pages and he sent me one copy of a book. And my picture and Allen's is in the front page of the book. I don't know what become of that book. I lost it.

(That's too bad.)

Maybe they got one on file over there.

(Well, going back to these parrots, what's the name for parrot in Kiowa?)

Of the parrot?

(Uh-huh. How do you say parrot?)

Well, I don't know too much of the parrot, only I see them. And I tell you about this zoo we went to. We--that zoo manager says,
