

Oh, he was not. I heard his nephew, Virgil, talkin' up here in Oklahoma City - - he was up here just not long ago, you know, before he died - - and he was talkin' about this Kate - they're always writing up to be this here Bar Room Gal. And Doc Holiday's wife, he said that Kate was a great big red-faced woman and was the ugliest thing. And I'll tell you somebody else that never did get married, either. And that was president Buchanan. I used to run around with a girl, and she was always braggin' about being the granddaughter of that Buchanan. And I showed her a page, a clipping, I clipped out of the paper of, you know, the different presidents that wasn't married. His neice was the First Lady of the House - - I believe it was his neice - - when Buchanan was president.

(What'd she say about that when you showed that to her?)

Well, she shup up. She never did blow about it anymore. Her name was Buchanan, all right. But there 's a lot of people named Buchanan. Now, If you really want to know some history, you know of some of the homesteaders, especially some of the hardships, you should go out here around a - Lone Wolf, and Tangum, and Altus and those places. Stay away from those tourist places 'cause most of those people are new. There should be quite a few of those people that you know, that hung on their land. But you take a little town like Luggert - - you know it's covered up with a lake now. So, many of those people have sold out to these people that are buying for this tourist business out there, and so many of them have sold out for that park that surrounds that lake. See. I don't know if our old homestead was taken into, you know, in that park or not. I'd like to go out there just to see, but I don't know. You know Mr. Kelley works all the time, and I just don't have a chance to get out there. I've been out there twice, you
