

old rocks (unin.) all that. It's this good thing about that, but I'm getting pretty well in years, but I sure have enjoyed myself. And I've been around lots of it. Them boys they use to have a lot of wild horses in there and I use to buy all that stuff down there, around that (unin.) and that be the government. And they was tryin' to get shed of those horses. Some of the prettiest horses you've ever seen. They be grazin' in there and they'd give them to an old boy if they could catch them. Well, they'd go down there some of them and they'd catch a few. And some of them would break their neck and get a scare that he'd have (unin.) go on through, under like you seen in those old country. And that horse a good one that way. He had it got it too close to the bluff and put his limb down and just made it run and it hit that bluff and it hung him see. And we got a few of them old bulls around that old man down there, his name is Charlie Colford, he's been down there I expect, Charlie's older then I am.

Colford. Yeah, Charlie Colford. And him and his wife is still out there. Charlie's (unin) and he use to work in that reserve at big ranch. He's got, I seen him once in a great while, not much.

(You spell that Colford?)

I guess you do. Colford. And they got Charlie, why Charlie why don't you sell out and move to town? Charlie say, "I'm satisfied right here, and" he said, "I'm going to stay till they ahul me away." That's his farm and he's there. I talked to him nearly a year or two ago, and he's too old for that now. And Charlie told me, he said up there at Mountain View we was visitin'. Charlie says, "Some of them gets after me when I'm ridin' my horse." And he said, "As long as I can see to catch my horse and put the saddle on him," he said, "I can ride him." He said, "Its good for me." And it is. Well, I ride a horse, I've ridin' one when--I wasn't ridin' when, I ride nearly every day. I trade a lot of horses. I've settin' the world a fire I thought.
