

Mr. T.: Can you read English Mr. Bird?

Mrs. P.: He said he doesn't read English.

Mr. T.: Can you write English Mr. Bird?

Mrs. P.: No he can't. He doesn't write any at all, he doesn't read.

Mr. T.: How did you sign the deed to this land?

Mrs. P.: He just put his thumb print on it, for a signature.

Mr. T.: What was the amount of money received for that 45 acres?

Mrs. P.: $1,360.

Mr. T.: At that time you were left without any tax exempt restricted land except tax exempt restricted land of your wife's, is that right?

Mrs. P.: Yes.

Mr. T.: How much tax exempted restricted land does Mrs. Bird have now?

Mrs. P.: 30 acres.

Mr. T.: That land is tax exempt and restricted?

Mrs. P.: Its restricted and tax exempt.

Mr. T.: What happened to the $1,360 that you received that was received from the sale of this 65 acres?

Mrs. P.: He says as far as he knows its still all there, they won't let him have it.

Mr. T.: The Bureau of Indian Affairs still has that money?

Mrs. P.: Yes, its still there.

Mr. T.: Was either, any of that money or of the $360 from the first sale used to buy another land?

Mrs. P.: He said he had to pay $300 to buy that land where he's living now. The land that belonged to his wife.

Mr. T.: He had to pay $360 to buy the property where their living now?

Mrs. P.: He had to pay $300 out of the $360 he got for the sale of his first land sale to buy the land where their living now.

Mr. T.: I thought you were living now on the land of your wife, your wife's land.

Mrs. P.: He says that the land that they thought was his wife's had been lost in taxes and that he would have to buy it back so he paid $300 for it.

Mr. T.: This is land that he had to buy back was the land that was his wife's tax exempt land?
