A TRUE STORY ABOUT A NEWLY WED COUPLE

For another one... (MARY SPEAKS IN KIOWA)

Got nothing but face, feet all round. And got little paws all round, four feet (Static). They remember. (Sentence not clear) 'I don't care who's living there, we're going to stay. Who own it (Unclear)? Got (Unclear) that doors open. So (unclear). And white man told (Unclear). Told him to get out, my, my house. (Unclear) Out. (Static) My home, don't get out. It's mine. And this man got out. (Static - Tape is inaudible.)

CHARLES: (SPEAKING KIOWA TO MARY) (Static) The third, the second time they went, see when they push that door - well, when they first get married, when they first got together. Well, they didn't want to stay with the tribe. So they wanted to be out to themselves. They just got married, newly married. So they left from that place. And they went way on out to another part of the country. They went out, they want to be alone. And they got way out there and they stayed around there for amny months and - uh - one day they were way out there, it got, it was in winter time, start, start getting bad. Start gettin', snow start coming down. And snow was bad and they were cold, about freezing. So they came up to a mountain, and they looked down that way and they seen a teepee right on the edge of the mountain. Seen a teepee, built. And they said, "Well look over there, there's a teepee over there. We don't care if they kill us," he said, "or whatever happen, we're going to freeze anyhow. So let's go on down there and go in there." Said, "That's the only way we can get safe from freezing." And that snow was getting deeper and deeper and colder and colder. So finally, they went on, they went on, they got over there and they went in. When they got in there, the teepee was set up and he said there was four sticks right on top of that fire. And it was burning. That fire was burning. And those
