

four sticks, just them four, no more sticks in it. It was warm in there but them four sticks kept the fire burning. It was warm in there, so they laid down and they went to sleep. They were tired out and about half froze and they laid there and they rested up good. So just as soon as they rested up good, they got up. And they had their own meat and stuff, you know. They start cooking, cooking that meat and stuff on that coal and there were just four sticks on there. No more, but four. So they burning days, you know, just burning, uh - enough to heat everything up, warm, you know. So they start cooking, she start cooking, and after she got through, well, they's feeding, after they got through eating well, little while after that, pretty soon there comes, they heard a footstep. Coming through that snow. Coming, you could hear them, you could hear his footsteps, coming. Finally he open that door and he come in. And he's one of those, one of those big cave man, big cave man, wild man. So they, he come in. He told them, he said, "You people get out. You got no business in my home. I don't want kill you," he said. "If you don't get out, I'm gonna kill you. If you are not going to leave, I'm going to kill you. Get out, get out of my place. Don't come in here." Just about that time someone saw that someone in that teepee up there. He said, "Get out," He said, "Get out. This is my home and I want you to stay out of it." He said, "I don't want you to come back no more." He said, "You leave them people alone. Them peoples alright, they're my friends." He said, "You just go on. Get away from there. You ain't got no business." Just as soon as he said that, well, that wild man run out. He run out. He got scared of this one talked to him, up there. Said, "Get out." And he said that four sticks that was on that fire when they come in there was still burning. It was still burning. So they stayed there for a little while there and finally they decide to go ahead and go on. And of course it was cold but the snow was kinda goin' down, you know. And (Static)...
